

Privacy Policy

Inani Securities Ltd. (Inani) may use certain systems/technology on this web site to collect information about/from users of this web site and compile information about how visitors use the web site, including but not limited to, information relating to the frequency of visits, the average length of visits, which pages are viewed during a visit, and the effectiveness of advertising on the web site.

Inani is committed to safeguard the confidentiality and security of information of the users of this web site. Inani may disclose any information that is provided through this web site to: any company within the company, to any other person or entity with the consent of the client, or if Inani have a right or duty to disclose or is permitted or compelled to so disclose such information by law, for the time being in force. For example, Inani may share/provide information with/to judicial bodies and regulatory authorities who have jurisdiction over Inani.

Inani may also enter into agreement(s) with other company(ies) to provide services to Inani or make services and products available to its clients and they may thus receive information about the users, but they may only use it for those purpose(s) that Inani specifies.

Certain sections or pages on this site may contain separate privacy policy, which is in addition to this privacy policy. In the event of any conflict between the two, the additional privacy policy will govern those sections or pages.